Project Description

You will help support our team of 5 to conduct research on regional engagements and investments in promoting inclusive economic growth in Asia. You will work closely with the team members and liaise with others across USAID in creating case studies that document and analyze the impact of our programming. Other deliverables could include assisting the team in its gender-lens investing research in Asia, which seeks to develop a business case for small- and medium-sized enterprises to mainstream gender-sensitive policies into their core operations; and providing other technical and operational support to the team.

Desired Skills Interests

Additional Information

Graduate students are strongly preferred. All work will be completed virtually. We seek a highly motivated, independent candidate with classroom and/or field experience in business administration, international economic development, Southeast Asia or South Asia studies; international work experience; interest in a career in international development; strong analytical, writing, and communications skills required; and a team player with the ability to manage multiple workstreams and deadlines.

More about the team: USAID's Asia Economic Growth team fosters economic integration in a region that encompasses economies at significantly different stages of development. Our regional portfolio is designed to promote inclusive economic growth through technical support to USAID Missions in the field on regional programs that promote trade and regional connectivity, entrepreneurship, access to markets, and private capital mobilization, as well as market-based approaches to food security. Our technical staff deliver Washington-based policy guidance, interagency coordination, and direct assistance on economic issues to our Missions, identifying ways to harness the dynamic and innovative economies in Asia.
